

ALSAN (formerly known as CGEAN) was established in 1970 as the Council on Graduate Education for Administration in Nursing as a formal organization dedicated to collegial relationships and intellectual exchange among nurse educators whose focus was nursing administration at the graduate level. ALSAN has now evolved to an organization with over 200 members from academic and practice settings with an expanded focus on nursing administration and leadership education and research at all levels.

MEMBER BENEFITS

Network with educators, practice leaders, and researchers in leadership and health systems to solve challenges and form creative partnerships around the world.

Attend the organization's annual international conference where prominent researchers, faculty, practice leaders, and graduate students share in the scholarship of leadership and health system research.

Access webinars, hot topic happy hours, white papers, the members only discussion board and other programs offered by ALSAN.

Receive an annual subscription to The Journal of Nursing Administration.
